Caballo Lake State Park

The Caballo Mountains serve as a majestic backdrop for Caballo Lake State Park, which boasts a full array of water sports, winter waterfowl watching, and cactus gardens in bloom.

This park's claim to fame are the majestic Bald and Golden Eagles that migrate through. Beginning in late October, both Bald and Golden Eagles arrive to nest at Caballo. Numerous Golden Eagles nest in the nearby Caballo foothills, while Bald Eagles will nest in large areas around the park, as well as within the park.

Visitors can stroll among yuccas, century plants, ocotillos, cow tongues, prickly pears, and other desert cacti growing in the park's two cacti gardens. Most of these cactus provide beautiful blooms in late March and early Spring.

Swimming, skiing, fishing, jet skiing, and windsurfing are some of the wet and wild activities available at the park. Both lake and river provide anglers with the opportunity to catch a variety of fish. The area is home to largemouth bass, walleye, white bass, catfish, crappie, bluegill, northern pike, sunfish, and an occasional rainbow trout.

There are developed campsites on a bluff overlooking the lake, with all the usual amenities, and even a few trees. The bulk of the park facilities are in the main section, on the west side of the lake, just north of the dam.
